

Farnia Fresnel, ENG98 Bio:

Family and community focused, an avid international traveler, recreational endurance runner, entrepreneur, and volunteer, Farnia Fresnel wears many hats. In her most enjoyable professional role, she acts as the Founder and Managing Partner at The Lensef Group \(TLG\), a woman and minority owned project management consulting and coaching firm. Farnia works with international clients on strategic issues related to people, planning, transformation, technology, and change. For more than 20 years, she has inspired professional services, fintech, finance, marketing, and non-profit companies to strategically grow faster with stronger leaders and teams, small businesses to adopt a long view, and groups of entrepreneurs & driven individuals to reset perspectives on their capabilities. Farnia is a board member for People Strategy at WEglobal, an award-winning international development consultancy, the Lead of the ICF Philadelphia Center City professional coaches group, Past President and serves on the nominating committee for the Penn Engineering Alumni Society, and an adjunct lecturer of IT Project Management at Penn State University. She is a lifelong learner and proudly holds a BSE in Engineering from Penn, an MBA from New York University's Stern School of Business and several international business, coaching and leadership assessment certifications.